Spring is finally here, the time of year that we all look forward to during those long slow winter months. It’s good to hear the sweet sound of the phone ringing with reports of ants and termites on the other end. Things are in full swing for us, and I hope they are for you as well.

With the increased number of call sometimes the stress can build. We must strive every day to keep our customers happy and deliver the best possible service to them that we can. Here is a customer commitment list to keep in mind:

- A customer is the most important person in any business. If it was not for our customers, we would not be in business.
- A customer is not dependent on you. You are dependent on them.
- A customer is not an interruption. They are the purpose of the work.
- A customer does not do you a favor when they call. You are not doing them a favor by serving them.
- A customer is part of a business, not an outsider.
- A customer is not someone to argue or match wits with.
- A customer brings you their wants. It is your job to try and fulfill those wants.
- A customer is the lifeblood of every business.

There is nothing more precious than a customer. You have no referrals without loyal customers, and these relationships are key to success.

I truly hope that you all have a busy and successful season.

Sincerely,

Jeremiah

I would like to thank the association for allowing me to represent MPMA in Washington, D.C. Here are the highlights of the conferences and my trip to the “Hill”.

STATE ASSOCIATION LEADERSHIP FORUM

NPMA’s new regulatory affair associate, Andrew Bray, lead the meeting. Andrew has replaced Gene Harrington who has taken a position he could not refuse with another organization. We wish Gene great success in his new endeavor.

The NPMA staff discussed the new composition of the 14th Congress:

One the House side:
Democrats 188
Republicans 245
Vacancy 2
Republicans gain 13 seats

On the Senate side:
Democrats 44
Republicans 54
Independents 2
Who caucus with Democrats Republicans Gain 9 seats

Including Bob Dold
President of Rose Pest Solutions in Chicago, IL!!
We have a voice in Congress!

With the change in Senate leadership, more legislation that is approved in the House will be voted on in the Senate.

There was a panel discussion of governmental affairs leaders from Colorado, Virginia, Georgia, Arizona, and New York. NPMA suggested that Missouri look to other states for guidance, when faced with new regulatory issues. For example the Georgia Pest Management Association defeated the levy of Sales Taxes on pest management services. It was also suggested that state pest management associations should form coalitions with pesticide user groups such as lawn care, nurseries, golf courses, city parks, and farmers. One big voice may accomplish more than many smaller voices.

LEGISLATIVE DAY PROGRAM

The Legislative Day program covered fumigation (Chemical Security Facilities), Food Safety Modernization Act, Bee Health, the Pest Management Records Modernization Act, and America’s Small Business Tax Relief Act of 2015 (HR 636).

The fumigation program pertained to new requirements of the Department of Homeland security. Companies who store fumigants, aluminum phosphide, magnesium phosphide, and sulfuryl fluoride may have to register their facilities. Contact the Chemical Security Help Desk at email address csat@hq.dhs.gov for more information. Each company needs to determine their storage amounts of these fumigants. For aluminum phosphide and magnesium phosphide, the storage amount is the placard amount of 15KG! Sulfuryl Fluoride is 2500 pounds. Once again, contact the Department of Homeland security to see if your business qualifies for this registration.

FOOD SAFETY MODERNIZATION ACT

This law (FSMA) was passed January 2011. The final regulations are supposed to be written by 6/30/2015. However, the regulators are expected to miss the deadline. This law was written to protect the 48 million people who suffer from food poisoning, plus the 3000 who die from contaminated food each year. Businesses who are exempt from this law are USDA Facilities (meat, poultry, egg), juice manufactures, seafood processors, alcohol related businesses, low acid canning, and small businesses. Where PMP’s can assist their food company clients is:

Section 101: FDA’s access to company records
Section 102: Registration and possible (Continued on page 5)
MPMA Legislative Day Report

March 15-19, 2015

SUSPENSION BY FDA
Section 103: Hazard analysis and risk-based prevention
FSMA is very complex. For anyone who would like to have the 33 page power point presentation, please contact me at 573-334-3003.

BEE HEALTH

MPMA’s focus topic was Bee Health. The value of insect pollination to US agricultural production is $16.00 billion where about three fourths is attributable to honey bees. The USDA estimates that 30% of the bee hives are lost over the winter months. Yet the bee population rebounds in the spring, summer, and fall so that the number of bee colonies are stable. According to February 9, 2015 Congressional Research Services Report Bee Health: The Role of Pesticides, “The precise reasons for honey bee loss are unknown.” Science suggests that parasites, diet, and nutrition, lack of genetic diversity, habitat loss, bee keeping practices, weather, and disease are affecting bee health. In fact, the USDA and EPA found the varroa mite as the “most detrimental pest of honey bees. Unfortunately some are blaming neonicotinoid pesticides as the cause for the decline in bee health.

In response to President Obama’s June 2014 Presidential memorandum, EPA will soon propose label language to 1500 pesticide products to reduce exposure to honey bees and other pollinators. Each state is required to develop & implement state pollinator protection plans. These plans focus on improving coordination and communication between beekeepers, growers, and property owners. The State of Missouri has joined DriftWatch. East Pest Management Company is encouraged to join. The goal is for commercial applicators to know where bee keepers’ hives are located to prevent accidental decimation of bees. The other purpose is to identify the location of sensitive crop registries to prevent accidental drift damage.

NPMA has written Best Management Practices for bees (Please find the attached BMPs). PENDING USDA/APHIS AQI FEE INCREASE RULEMAKING

In April of 2014, the US Department of Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) proposed rulemaking that will increase agricultural quarantine inspection (AQI) fees. This proposed rule would impose $540 million in additional “user fees” including a forty five percent fee increase to fumigators. APHIS has not increased fees in 10 years, but they raised the price without consulting the pest management industry. This action is a violation of Executive Order 13563 of 2011. Seventy percent of fumigations are performed during overtime hours for the inspectors so the fumigators are charged at a higher rate. The inspection fees plus overtime can mount to $700-$800.00 which can exceed the fumigation fee and the value of the commodity.

To add transparency to this rulemaking, Congresswoman Frederica Wilson has drafted HR 1091 which requires APHIS to withdraw the pending AQI rulemaking and to instead meet with stakeholders to develop an alternative AQI fee rule. On the Hill, I asked the Congressmen/Congresswomen to support Congresswoman Wilson’s bill.

PEST MANAGEMENT RECORDS MODERNIZATION ACT

This act would permit pest management professionals to electronically convey information to consumers and state agencies. In December 2014, H.R. 5714 passed the House by a voice vote but failed to pass the Senate before the session ending.

Our goal was to have the House pass this bill again and send it over to the Senate for approval. This is not a controversial subject and should make it through both houses this year.

AMERICA’S SMALL BUSINESS TAX RELIEF ACT OF 2015 (H.R. 636)

This bill amends the Internal Revenue Code to make permanent after 2014 the $500,000 allowance for the expensing of depreciable business property (section 179 property). H.R. 636 allows businesses to write-off the entire purchase price up to $500,000.00 for the year the property is purchased instead of over several years. Qualifying equipment included machines purchased for business use, air conditioning and heating units, business vehicle with a weight in excess of 6,000 pounds, computers, software, office equipment, application equipment and heat equipment. If no action is taken, this deduction will be reduced to $25,000 for 2015.

H.R 636 passed the House 272-142 on February 13, 2015. Our target was to obtain support for this issue in the Senate.

WHAT I ACCOMPLISHED ON THE HILL

Concerning Bee Health, I asked the Congressmen/Congresswomen to withhold support for measures that unfairly blame pesticides for the decline in bee health; specifically H.R. 1284 that cancels the registration of neonicotinoid pesticides. For the APHIS fees, I asked the Congressmen/Congresswomen to...
Congresswomen to support HR 1091 that adds transparency to the rulemaking for these fees. I asked both the House and Senate delegation to support the Pest Management Records Modernization Act. Finally, I thanked the Congressmen/Congresswomen for their vote to pass the America’s Small Business Tax Relief Act of 2015. For the Senate, I asked them to support this issue in a forthcoming bill.

Dropped literature off at his office.

In Summary, the day on the “Hill” was very successful! We will be able to stop HR 1284, the bill which cancels the registration of Neonicotinoid pesticides, in committee. I believe NPMA will receive bipartisan support for HR 1091, which will force APHIS to review the inspection fee increase charged for fumigation. The Electronic Records issue should be passed in the House and Senate. Finally, the Tax Relief Bill, which has passed the House, is supported by both Senators, Blunt and McCaskill.

Benchmarking Your Business
Pest Control Technology (PCT)

PCT and NPMA teamed up to survey the industry about a variety of operating ratio benchmarks. We talked to PMPs about everything from vehicle expenses and employee costs to add-on services revenues and material/supply costs. How does your company compare?

By Jonathan K. Sweat, Director, BASF Professional & Specialty Solutions

As a pest control business owner how do you define success? Is it in the total number of satisfied customers you’ve provided pest control services to during the past 12 months? Is it in successfully achieving your list of corporate goals and objectives established at the beginning of the previous year? Or is it simply a matter of assessing your bottom-line performance when reviewing your company’s year-end financials?

Chances are it’s a combination of all those things, but to get a truly accurate sense of how your company performed this past year wouldn’t it be helpful to know how you stacked up against your industry peers? That’s the theory — and enormous value — behind the process of benchmarking your business, an exercise that allows you to compare your company’s performance against others in the industry, helping to identify those areas where you can make improvements in the coming year. And isn’t that what long-term business success is all about ... continuous improvement?

Last year, BASF Professional & Specialty Solutions partnered with the National Pest Management Association and PCT magazine to be the corporate sponsor for a comprehensive Operating Cost Ratio Survey designed to assist pest control companies in benchmarking their businesses. Given our longtime commitment to supporting the advancement of the professional pest management industry, not only from a product perspective but from a business perspective, we welcomed the opportunity.

The results of that survey appear in an exclusive executive summary in this month’s issue of PCT magazine. We would like to thank all those randomly selected pest management professionals who took the time to participate in the survey. We’re confident you’ll find the results of the survey beneficial in benchmarking your business, laying the groundwork for a successful 2015!

Solutions Showcase: Ants
Pest Management Professional (PMP)

Termidor SC termicide/insecticide creates a zone of nonrepellent protection around a home. Ants passing through the treated area pick up the product and transfer the active ingredient to nestmates through routine contact, which enables Termidor to control ants that never make direct contact with a treated surface. Additionally, Alpine WSG insecticide is a spray with a flexible label, allowing it to be applied indoors and out – including doors and windows, under sinks, landscaping and yards. It complements Termidor SC by expanding the transfer zone, providing a one-two punch against ants.

Pest Management Professional (PMP)

New Trelona Advance Termite Bait System (ATBS) delivers certainty and flexibility to PMPs who want control, predictability and price assurance as part of a successful termite baiting system. Trelona Compressed Termite Bait, with the new active ingredient Novaluron, provides faster termite elimination and uses less bait than previous active ingredients, the company says. PMPs that are already using ATBS and have existing accounts that haven’t had termite activity for a year can begin using Trelona ATBS and benefit from a six-month inspection interval.

8 Sinful Customer Service Actions
Nancy Friedman, the Telephone Doctor

This is not MY list. These “sins” are from my audiences who share their views when I speak at conferences across the country. We survey the groups to find out what bothers them from companies.

And man, how they love to vent. And they love to let me know what bugs them, what frustrates them, how they want to be treated as a customer. Usually a freewheeling discussion and one that gets my attention a lot. It should get yours.

So listen up. Your customers are talking to you. And customer service training can help you.

Drum roll please...in no particular order. By the way, these go for on the phone or in person. As a matter of fact, all 6 touch points of communication.

Sin #1: Not smiling
Man is that important. Our Telephone Doctor motto: “A phony smile is better than a real frown” would have helped the gal who was trying to help me Saturday. What a poopy face she had on her. I refused to let it get me down or let her infect me at all. I smiled all the way through our conversation. I’m pretty sure it aggravated her. As my husband says, “just be glad her head isn’t on your body.”

Sin #2: Coworkers talking to each other and ignoring the customer
That’s an OMG! Stop talking to ‘each other’ when a customer walks into the store. Immediately. Talk with them! Wave to them. Smile at them. If you’re talking with another customer, they’ll see how nice you acknowledge all the others.

Sin #3: Not caring
Your customer can tell, immediately, if you ‘care’ or not. The immediate interaction retailers make with the customer needs to be a ‘caring’ one. Your facial expressions, your tone of voice, your listening skills. They can tell if you judge them as an annoyance or not. It’s usually written all over your face. It’s the old saying “the customer doesn’t care how much you know, until they know you care.”

Sin #4: A poor attitude
There are dozens, ok hundreds, of articles on how important ATTITUDES are in connecting with customers. Almost everyone in customer service has written one. But it’s not something you can easily, if at all, teach. The difference between attitude and moods?

Attitudes are permanent. Moods are temporary. Find staff with the permanent attitudes and you’ll have less bad moods, because those of us with a great attitude don’t like to wallow in the bad mood department. It’s not rocket science. It’s not brain surgery. It’s plain old common sense.

Sin #5: Rushing the customer
Everyone is busy. Ballgames to go to. Appointments to make. Things to do. Yada, yada.

The answer to that? Thank goodness we’re busy. We should be thanking our lucky stars we’re busy. But being busy does not give you carte blanche to rush folks. An easy, fresh smile to the person who’s waiting will go a lonnnnnnnng way! Count on that.

Sin #6: Not listening
Listening skills, my friends, is the number one skill or trait our customers want from us. Time after time that trumps the list of ‘what do I want.” Listen to us talk, to our questions. Listen to our requests. Our LISTENUP article, goes a long way. Take a peek.

Sin #7: Don’t point! Take them.
There are a handful of stores who when you ask them where something is will hand deliver you to the spot. There needs to be more stores like that. Nuf said.

Sin #8: Pushing customers off to the WEBSITE because you’re busy or you don’t want to help
Customers are pretty smart. If they want your website, they normally can find it all by themselves. Pushing them to the website because you’re too busy or don’t feel like helping is a major sin. It’s like asking them to leave your house.

Be more responsive. Interact with the customer. Don’t push them to the WEBSITE at the first chance. Chances are they’ll find a competitor’s site first and never see yours. Bingo! You lost a sale. If you ‘have’ to get them to your site, you might consider going with them and helping them along.

Several of my clients have come to me with this question: "We have had termite warranty agreements with customer, but they sell the house to someone else, and that person fails to pick up the agreement to continue protection against termites. How can we get the new homeowners to recognize the value of termite protection and continue the agreement?"

I posed this question to the LinkedIn Group – MARKETING PEST CONTROL SERVICES – and the responses were very interesting.

Some PMPs felt their renewals increased when they incorporated visible bait systems where the customer can see the device.

Others offer bundled services at a discounted rate to pick up all services on the home. They offer termite protection and "Free" pest control for one price. One PMP sends a cancellation letter via certified mail and reports that it gets the customer’s attention.

Another suggestion was to offer a 20% discount if the customer would pay 5 years renewal in advance. The benefit to the customer was twofold: 1. They saved money 2. It was more convenient. The same PMP reported that about 25% of customers took advantage of it.

Another PMP reports, “The biggest problem we face with selling and renewing termite accounts in my market is the lack of consumer awareness when it comes to termites. In the past when swarming season came, all of the local news stations ran stories on the horrors of termites. This type of reporting in our area does not exist as it did in the past. Now it has become our job to inform the public about termites. Unfortunately we can't get the same attention as the local news gets. Termites are still out there but they just don’t get media attention.”

Customers need valuable, compelling information about the benefits of your service...and they need it often. Once a year won’t cut it. Use invoices, cards, letters, emails, drop-by visits, phone calls, blogs, etc.

Others made these suggestions:
- Make scheduling renewal inspections easier on your clients.
- Communicate with your clients more often than once a year when you want them to renew. Keep them aware of termite activity in the area, new exotic species, moisture control, reducing termite conditions, how costly termite damage is and that their homeowner's insurance does not cover termite damage.
- Treat every home as it was your mother’s house. Don’t just inform your clients of termite issues. Look out for other problems that may exist in and around the home. This builds more value to your service and a stronger relationship with your client.

One PMP sends out statements 30 days in advance of the expiration date, and includes a message that if you are the new homeowner, there is a Valuable Termite Warranty already in place and you may be eligible to renew the contract at a reduced price. We offer a $75 transfer fee for the new homeowner to start off with, that demonstrates the value there. Generally if they not only renew the annual termite warranty plus sign up for annual pest control service the company waives the $75 transfer fee (more savings for them).

Show cases studies of others in the neighborhood (with their permission) who have recently had termites, learned about prevention. It is an insurance policy for their biggest investment ... the home. Show them what the cost of repairs would cost.

Offering a termite “service agreement" vs. a contract allows an operator to market renewals even if they did not treat the property.

Offering to do inspections for real estate agents at little or no fee to their listings might also get your foot in the door. No damage coverage, only subterranean termite infestations.

Title or escrow closing arrangements are a good time to offer the service agreement. A local mortgage company who requires homeowner insurance, flood insurance, taxes etc., paid out of escrow, would be another source for termite service agreement renewals if it was paid the same time. Homeowners can relate to insurance and why they have to have it. A termite service agreement can be included in the thinking of what they need to have on their home.

From the Claims File

Andy McGinty, EVP/COO, LIPCA Insurance

Our insured put a house under a termite contract about 1.5 years ago. The contract in question was your typical termite damage warranty. Pretty good contract but could be stronger to protect his business but that’s another story. A graph was done but the original evidence of termite activity/damage was not listed. Anyway, the customer calls one day and says he has live termites. Our insured goes out and verifies the infestation and finds isolated infestation/damage on one wall inside the home. Routine type of claim that PMPs see over time that perform termite work.

Here is the curveball. Our insured discusses with the customer, causation, how the area is going to be treated and how the repairs are going to be handled. Again pretty routine situation which a lot of PMPs have tried to handle on their own without involving their insurance company. Happens every day.

What does not happen every day is the insured telling the customer to go ahead and take care of the damages and send the PMP the bill as “he will take care all the damage”. A common mistake that unfortunately happens more often than you think. To add more color to this story is insured was related to the homeowner and did not expect anything more than a bill for the damage our insured witnessed earlier. As you have guessed, the bill sent to our insured by the customer/relative was a little more than what was anticipated. Our insured was expecting a bill of less than $5,000 and the bill received was approximately $40,000. For those keeping track, that is 8 times the amount the insured was expecting to pay.

Needless to say this insured does not have $40,000 to reimburse the customer/relative. He is now being sued for the damage repair and one of the allegations are “he will take care of all the damage”. Just to be clear to everyone, our insured admits he said this.

So the questions that many of you, along with me, are asking:

1. How often did the insure keep tabs with the damages and extent of damage?
2. Why did the PMP promise the customer/relative “he would take care of all the damage”?
3. The contract is only 1.5 years old but the graph is basically blank. How much damage is really owed? Can the insured (or insurance carrier) reduce or mitigate the previous damage or all damage that is being claimed?
4. Do you think there is a coverage issue with the insurance carrier promising to fix damage?
5. How many laps around the track should the insured have to run as punishment!!!!!!!

Consider the questions yourself and compare to our answers below.

Questions from the previous article:

1. How often did the insure keep tabs with the damages and extent of damage?
2. Why did the PMP promise the customer/relative “he would take care of all the damage”?
3. The contract is only 1.5 years old but the graph is basically blank. How much damage is really owed? Can the insured (or insurance carrier) reduce or mitigate the previous damage or all damage that is being claimed?
4. Do you think there is a coverage issue with the insurance carrier promising to fix damage?
5. How many laps around the track should the insured have to run as punishment!!!!!!!

Our Answers:

1. As you have guessed the answer is “NONE”!
2. The homeowner was related to the insured. So, of course, he thought that my relative would never try and take advantage of me. Wrong! Seen more family squabbles over pest control claims that I can count.
3. There all kinds of ways to mitigate the damages. A lot depends on the state that you are located. But the blank graph is the killer. It becomes and he said, they said credibility issue and since the insured did not go back out to check up on the damages-they will have a tough time controlling the damages claimed.
4. YES!!!!!!!!!!!! In just about every general liability policy there are conditions where you cannot promise to pay or “prejudice” the rights of the insurance carrier/policy to incur to pay damages that they are not obligated to pay under the law.
5. Well let’s just say if he ate before he had to run, the end results would not be pretty!

Next claim:
You perform services to a customer to do a treatment and repair some very minor damage at the customer’s home. The PMP feels the work was completed as promised and per the terms of the contract. Pretty routine right?

Well when the customer goes and pays the bill which is supposed to be around $1100. The PMP gets the check and it is about $300 short. The insured tries to deal with the customer to see why the payment was reduced. The customer says that he did not like the quality of the repairs and was told that it would take around $300 to correct by another company.

The PMP requests to try and redo the work to the satisfaction of the customer but is refused and will no longer communicate to try an amicably resolve. So what can the PMP do to try and seek satisfaction against this customer? Oh by the way, the customer is a trial lawyer:
1. Take the customer to small claims court?
2. Slit the customer’s tires? (yes we had to deal with this issue in the past)
3. Protest in front of the customer’s home? (again yes we had to deal with this in the past)
4. Put something in social media about the customer’s actions with colorful “opinions” of how the PMP feels about this person?

Consider the questions yourself and compare to our answers below.

Questions from the previous article:

3. Protest in front of the customer’s home? (again yes we had to deal with this in the past)
4. Put something in social media about the customer’s actions with colorful “opinions” of how the PMP feels about this person?

Our Answers:
1. You could but is your time worth $300 or more to hear a judge “Wapner” make that type of decision especially when they know so little about what you do on a daily basis?
2. Yes please don’t do this. Especially when the store’s camera gets you on film. Yes a very similar situation occurred like this and it does not help that credibility issue that comes up at trial and we are trying to defend you.
3. Those trespassing allegations in the lawsuit are a pain to get dismissed. The insured ended up losing more business because of this action. Told me, “Really didn’t think that one through.”
4. Yes this is the main question and issue of this claim. Our insured did this and is being sued for over $10,000. Most of the allegations are for intentional acts to defame, slander, etc and are not covered under most GL polices that I have seen. Best thing to do is WAIT A DAY TO CALM DOWN! I know it is hard and have made the same mistakes by responding to fast. Be careful.

Next Claim:
This one is more serious. Bed bugs which we know most PMPs are tired of hearing about but the claims are now more common than ever. Attorneys around the country are starting to specialize in suing anyone around mainly due to some of the large settlements and jury verdicts.

Our insured treats a hotel. Bed bugs found on the second floor but he also wants to inspect the rooms to the side, three rooms above and three below to see if there are any live bed bugs. Pretty reasonable request other than the manager says no as he didn’t want to pay for these “extra” inspections. So the insured treats the one room. Months later he gets sued by a customer that stayed at the hotel and was bitten by bed bugs.

It is rare that the PMP gets sued directly from the plaintiff. It is more common to be brought in on a 3rd party action by the hotel (the hotel gets sued by the customer and the hotel then sues the pest company after that). This is where it gets very interesting.

Our investigation reveals that the room where the customer was bitten was one of the rooms that our insured wanted to treat but was told no. In reading the allegations, the customer sued our insured because…….wait for it.……."We should have forced the manager of the hotel to inspect the room where the plaintiff was bitten."
Yes they said “forced”. Of course after shaking my head a few minutes I call the plaintiff attorney and go over the facts and why our insured was sued directly by his client. After the typical “lawyerese” response I basically told the attorney you have no contract with our insured so that exposure is out. We have it documented we requested to inspect that room but was refused by the hotel manager. 5 days later our insured was dismissed. How did we get a dismissal that fast you say?

Questions:
1. How did the PMP document the manager refusing the other inspections?
2. Is documenting your file sufficient?
3. What other documents should be used to protect your company when this happens (and you know it does a lot!).
4. Is it worth the service and money when the customer limits what you know needs to be done vs. what services you end up performing?

Consider the questions yourself, possibly discuss at your training sessions and compare to our answers that will be printed in next edition.
Good luck.

How to Survive in a Changing Economy

Lloyd Merritt Smigel

Have you noticed that gas prices are up? The building industry is in the toilet. No one is spending money as they used to? The overall Real Estate industry is down, and with all this going on – what are YOU doing differently? If you are still running your company, the way you always did – good luck to you. Your profits and growth figures will shrink.

So what do you do?

Uh – oh. I am going to say the “C” work that everyone hates. You have to CHANGE.

Change the way you have been doing things. Many of the companies I work with hate this, but they have to throw the excess weight off the ship or it will go down. They may even have to change the direction their boat is going. Yes, it has been a comfortable ride at sea, but the weather has certainly changed.

Here are a few of the changes you might want to look into:

1. Have a Strategy Meeting
2. Better routing – Less gas expenditures
3. Increase prices, at least annually
4. Don’t sell cheap – this is not the time.
5. Be sure to get decent initials on all jobs.
6. Decide on what accounts or divisions are not worth continuing
7. Eliminate personnel that you are ‘carrying’
8. Review or establish an effective sales Department
9. Increase your collection efforts
10. Review your hiring procedures to bring in better people
11. Cross Train
12. Tighten up or establish your quality control and quality assurance programs
13. Review your Marketing program
14. Look for additional add on services
15. Review Present Goals and Objectives
16. Review your training needs

The above are just some of the items the companies I consult with have been attacking.

Yes, there are more, but I wanted to inform you that if the economy continues this way – you had better be ready to “ride it out”.

If you don’t make changes in the above, you may sink. I have already seen companies sell because the water is getting to rough for them.

The problem with all of the above is that in many cases the owner/manager does not know HOW to make these changes. Get help.

One of the things I see out there quite often is that the owner/manager KNOWS that he has to change but does not want to ask for help. He or she would rather see the ship go down than to admit to anyone that he or she does not know what to do. Remember, all these big ships need tugboats to get them in to the harbor. If you need help – GET IT!

It doesn’t matter what it costs to keep your ship afloat. The repercussions are horrendous if you DON’T get the help.

Most of the Family Businesses I work with have this problem from one generation to the other. It is often, at this point in time, the younger generation wants to make many changes. The problem is that some may be good and others not. You might want to get input to the decision making because the wrong decision could be fatal.

These hard times that are upon us will separate many of mediocre run companies from the good ones. This is the time to ACT not to postpone over and over and over.….

Change in the economy means we have to work SMARTER not HARDER! Our economy has changed and we have to change with it. I am still involved with the Discovery retreats, which are designed to help you make the necessary changes to advance in this economy not just stay afloat or be happy to make payroll. It is time for YOU to invest in YOU and LEARN what you need to know to establish a PLAN to move forward.

If you stand still, you will be trampled to death.

Why Advertise?

Lloyd Merritt Smigel

I don't get it. People spend lots and lots of money to get people to call them and then when they do:

1. They get a recording Press 1 for this Press 2 for that and hang up
2. No one answers the phone after 5 rings and hang up
3. They get someone who has no idea what he or she is doing
4. They are told that someone will have to call them back.
5. They are put on hold for 3 hours
6. They get to listen to your on hold advertising and/or elevator music.

What in the world is going on out there?

The other side of this coin is that you are cancelling more accounts than you are getting in.

HOLDING ON to your accounts, in my humble opinion, is just as important as getting new accounts – maybe even more important.

It is also a bit bizarre to see how easy it is to cancel your services. Often some office person takes the call and merely processes it rather than try to save it.

All in all, why are you advertising if #1, you are not professionally handling incoming calls and, #2 have a program to save every account that wants to cancel?

Here’s another scenario for you. I call your company to complain to the manager. My expectations is for him or her to ’make it right’ so I don’t cancel (or sue).

Me – “Is the Manager in, please?”

Operator – “Who’s calling?” (Note: She IGNORED my question)

ME – “I am a customer and would like to talk to the manager.”

Operator – “.. and what is this in reference to?”

Me – “It’s in reference to a problem I am having with your company.”

Operator – “and what is that sir?”

Me – HANG UP – CANCEL – CALL MY ATTORNEY

Me – “Hi, I would like to talk to someone about your Pest Services”

Operator – “Please hold.”

Operator – “Can I help you?”

Me – “Yes, I would like to talk to someone about your Pest Serviced.”

Operator – “Our sales representative is out right now – can I have him call you back?”

Me – “How long would that be?”

Operator “It would probably be some time today or tomorrow – please hold.”

BYE BYE

I see and hear and LIVE this almost daily. We all do. And then we hear how tough business is. Go figure.

The point is that before you decide to advertise clean up your house before the new company calls on you. Implement some policies – get a strategy and make each call count for new business and save as many customers as you can.

Mike Katz, the President of Western Exterminating Company heads up one of the largest Pest Control companies in the U.S. I call his office and ask for Mike Katz.

Me – “I’d like to speak to Mike Katz, please.”

Operator – “One moment please.”

Mike – This is Mike, how can I help you?”

...and then I call a little company and I get drilled. The owner/manager screens his calls because he is too busy. I believe Mike is just as busy. When I ran a branch or a district or was National Training Director with over 50 offices, I never screened my calls.

If we ARE truly a service business – perhaps we should act like one.

For those of you out there that are on top of this – Great. Keep up the good work.

If you are not in tune to true service – fear not – the customer can always go elsewhere.
